

BCDC Maintenance Dredging Permit Application History

To the Reader: The following information has been compiled from the information in BCDC's dredging permit files in an effort to provide the public the opportunity to review the status of the dredging applications at the Commission. If you are interested in the status of a particular open file, you can find that information on the bcdc website under the Announcements section by clicking on Dredging Permit Applications. Both this chart and the dredging application chart are updated periodically as applications come in and as permits are issued.

The chart has been broken up into sections according to the type of approval that was requested. The name of the applicant is in the left hand column and the permit number follows in the next column. At the top of each column is a description of what information is in that column. The "issues" column states very briefly any unusual problems that were experienced in the issuing of that permit. At the end of each section is a summary of the actions taken and the length of time it took to complete that particular step of the permit process. The total number of permits is given, then the number of "thirty day letters" (letters requested required information for filing an application as complete), and the average amount of time spent overall on that step of the application. The last column states what action was taken on the application or whether the matter is still pending. If the application is open, either the staff is waiting on information or is processing the permit. Please feel free to contact the Commission staff if you have questions about this chart.
